The cau-Lion of the P. & O. navigators is proverbia and indisputable—only, it does not touch the particular question under discussion; In our opinion, the distinction drawn by

Mr. Johnson between a sailing and steamer race, is a valid and proper distinction: Success in the one is the reward of skill and perseverance: in the other of mere hard driving, more than likely accompanied by recklessness. There is absolutely none but the most common-place skill called into play in the steam race-mechanical force in piling on coals being the chief factor the problem. For this reason, we never hear of steam-yacht-racing-it would be a sheer absurdity. On the 25th October last, the two French steamere Lacukai and Hoongking, together with a steam launch, left Hongkong, charged by the Tetai Mah, of the Province of Yunnan, to transport for him some inunitions of war, by going up the Hoongkinng, or Red River, which traverses the Province of Tonquin, with the object of opening up a new trade route with that Province. The expedition was headed by M. Dupuis, merchant of Hankow, assisted by M. Millot, merchant of Shanghai. On the 9th November they arrived at Tonquin, at the mouth of river hitherto nuknown to Europeans, called the Concum. Here M. Dapuis had an interview with the Royal Commissioner, Li, formerly ambussador at Pekin for the King of Annam, and Minister of Foreign Affairs at Huć, who promised an answer from the King as to wifether the expedition could proceed, within sixteen it, but the affair being very important it would outweigh the temptation to rashness held out the least. Seeing clearly that this simply meant by the differential rates of freight. Nobody complete evasion, the expedition, upon the pretext that the water was salt and the climate anhealthy where they were, expressed their intention of proceeding a little higher up the river and after some little parley did so. After going some distance up this river it was found to break off into four branches, one of which proved to be navigable, and, by means of it, the vessels made their way successfully to the Red. River, arriving in it on the 18th December. They followed the River to-Keobo, or Hannois the capital of Tonquin, where they arrived ou the 22ud December. On arriving there, it was found that there was not enough water to permit the steamers to proceed, and boats were in consequence borrowed of the natives, not, howposition on the part of the Mandarins. one's memory. The Marshal saw the disfayour with which the new Soverign was regarded as a foreigner, and, forecasting his downfall, turned his back on the sinking cause. The thread of Madrid intrigues is difficult to follow, and the resalt would not be worth the pains. But it cannot be doubted that in the latter period of the King's roign the social influence of the Serranos was used against him. The slight put upon the Queen on the accession of the Royal Christening is sufficient proof of the sentiments entertained by the Duke and Duchess de la Torre. From them disloyality radiated through that Madrid society in which they held the highest place Serrano more toan any man in Spain is responsible for the temper which made the Monarchy impossible. He may, therefore, be beld justly chargeable with having produced the Republic. In the debate which followed the communication tion of the King's last Mossage, one of the Royalists said regretfully that the Ropublic must be accepted, inasmuch as there was not a King to be found. Numbers acquiesced on these grounds, and no other. Who was the cause that the King, who had been at last found after so much trouble and so long a suspense, abdicated, leaving his own experiences as a warning to other Princes ? Serrane and no other. When the same man mingles again in political intrigue, we cannot feel surprise or pity at the fate which befalls him.

A rural visitor upset the Chattanooga gaso meter, under the impression that it was a sugar hogshend, and the city was left in Markness. A well-dressed young man, calling himself a grocer's assistant, has committed 10 bur-Maries at Clerkenwell, and has been committed for trial on four charges.

Douglas Jerroid, for a long time one of the editors of Punch, said that the man never lived who would make 365 good jokes a year, or even half the number. One a week he thought a vory füir allowance.

A Yankee in Paris, who was listening to the boasts of a lot of England and French artists about the wonderful genius of their respective countrymen, "broke out" and said; "Ob pshaw! Yeon git cout! Why, there's Bil Devine, of our village, who kin paint a piece of cark so zackly like marble, that the minute you throw it into the water it will aink to the bottom ker chug, jes' i ke a stone."

WHALE FIGHT .- A bloody rencontra ocourred off Fernandina, Fla., recently, between a lot of whales from lifty to sixty feet in length. and a school of a smaller species of the same animals, known as the black fish. The latter for a time sustained the unequal contest; but the superior size and power of their adversaries drove them to take refuge in the shallow water of the harbour, where the whales were unable to follow. Many of the black fish, in their headlong flight, ran on the shouls, and the receding six black lish, one of them twenty-three feet in length, were placed hors de combat. DESPERATE DURG WITH KNIVES BY BOYS -Two Paris gamens, from 12 to 13 years of age, the other day, imitating their superlors, resolved to settle a quartel by an appeal to arms. Their wespons were knives, with which they retired to a piece of waste ground, anattended by seconds or witnesses, and out and backed ouch other till they both fell exhausted to the ground. Their ories and groung attracted the attention of some passers-by, who repaired to the spot and found the lade lying side by side blood flowing freely from their arms, nacks, breasts, and thighs.
